

CONTRIBUTORS/COLLABORATEURS

Robert Babcock, a member of the editorial board of L/LT, teaches history at the University of Maine at Orono and is the author of Gompers in Canada.

Guy Bélanger is a graduate student in Montreal.

Marjorie Cohen teaches at York University and is on the editorial board of Canadian Forum.

Alan Dawley of Trenton State College is the author of the award winning book, Class and Community: The Industrial Revolution in Lynn.

Peter DeLottinville is an archivist at the Public Archives of Canada.

Bernard Hobby is a student in the writing programme at David Thompson University in Nelson, B.C. A varied work life has included a number of years in B.C. pulp mills.

Marcel LeDuc is a graduate student at the University of Montreal.

Ian McKay, a Ph.D. candidate at Dalhousie University, is completing a study of mainland Nova Scotia coal miners.

John Morton, California born, has worked various jobs in his 15 years in B.C. He is currently a boiler operator in the slag furnaces of the "world's largest lead/zinc smelter."

John O'Brien teaches at Dalhousie University and is completing a book on blacks in Richmond, Virginia in the 1850s and 1860s.

8 LABOUR/LE TRAVAILLEUR

Bryan Palmer, author of A Culture in Conflict and an editor of L/LT, has recently moved to Simon Fraser University.

Ian Radforth, a doctoral candidate in history at York University, is writing a dissertation on lumber workers in northern Ontario in the twentieth century.

Satu Repo is a Toronto writer and researcher. She is a former managing editor of This Magazine and a frequent contributor to it. She is currently doing research on the Finnish-Canadian immigrant experience.

Richard Roberts teaches African history at Stanford University.

Jacques Rouillard of the University of Montreal is an editor of L/LT and the author of numerous books, the most recent of which is a history of the CSN.

Joan Sangster is a Ph.D. student at McMaster University. She is completing a thesis on Canadian Women in Radical Politics and Labour, 1920-50.

Roger Taus is an American worker-poet.

Robert Tremblay is a graduate student at Laval and an editor for the Dictionnaire biographique du Canada.

Douglas Vaisey is the Head of Information Services at the Patrick Power Library, St. Mary's University, and is the compiler of The Labour Companion.

Jonathan Wagner, formerly of the University of Winnipeg, is pursuing a new career. His study of National Socialism in Canada has recently appeared.

Tom Wayman was born in Hawkesbury, Ontario in 1945 but raised in B.C. He has worked in a wide range of white and blue collar jobs. Presently teaching writing at David Thompson University Centre in Nelson, B.C., his most recent books are: Living On The Ground: Tom Wayman Country (Toronto: McClelland and Stewart 1980) and the edited anthology Going For Coffee (Madera Park, B.C.: Harbour Publishing 1981).

John Weaver teaches history at McMaster University and has published a number of articles in Canadian urban history.