

CONTRIBUTORS / COLLABORATEURS

Peter Akers is based in Brisbane and was responsible for developing the software package for the database that formed the basis for this research.

Donica Belisle is a doctoral candidate in Trent University's and Carleton University's joint Canadian Studies programme. She is researching the social and cultural histories of department store owners, staff, and customers in 19th- and 20th-century Canada.

Andrew Bonthius received his MA in US History from San Francisco State University in 1991. His undergraduate thesis "The Origins of the Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union" was published in the Southern California Quarterly, 59 (Winter 1977).

Eileen Boris, the Hull Professor of Women's Studies at the University of California, Santa Barbara, is the author of Home to Work: Motherhood and the Politics of Industrial Homework and co-editor of Homeworkers in Global Perspective and Major Problems in the History of American Workers.

Francesca Degiuli, a graduate student in the Department of Sociology at the University of California, Santa Barbara, wrote her master's thesis on "The Introduction of Temporary Work in Italy: How Flexibility Becomes Routine." Her PhD project addresses globalization, women, and immigration.

David Frank teaches in the Department of History at the University of New Brunswick-Fredericton and is the former editor of Acadiensis. His teaching includes a course entitled Canadian History on Film. He recently published J.B. McLachlan: A Biography (Toronto 1999).

Margaret Gardner is Professor and Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Academic) at the University of Queensland, Brisbane, Australia.

Michael Lonardo is Social Sciences Librarian in the Queen Elizabeth II Library, Memorial University of Newfoundland.

Michèle Martin teaches in the School of Journalism and Communication at Carleton University. Her current research includes a comparative analysis of the development of 19th-century illustrated periodicals in England, Canada, and France and the influence of their massively distributed content on the formation of “national identities.”

Sean Purdy is a doctoral candidate in the Department of History at Queen’s University. His dissertation is entitled “From Place of Hope to Outcast Space: Tenants and Territorial Regulation in Regent Park Housing Project, 1949-2000.” He is currently conducting research for a comparative historical study of slums, ghettos, and favelas in Canada, the United States, and Brazil. He currently lives in São Paulo, Brazil.

Michael Quinlan is a professor in the School of Industrial Relations and Organisational Behaviour at the University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia. He has contributed to the international master and servant law project undertaken by Paul Craven and Douglas Hay at York University.

Ellen L. Ramsay is a faculty member of the Division of Humanities at York University specializing in historical and contemporary visual culture. Her current interests include the history of the secular movement in Canada and some aspects of post-colonial theory.

Robert C.H. Sweeny, responsable des titres français de notre bibliographie, enseigne l’histoire québécoise à l’Université Memorial.

Marcel van der Linden is Research Director of the International Institute of Social History in Amsterdam, Professor of Social Movement History at the University of Amsterdam, and Editor of the International Review of Social History. His most recent book is Transnational Labour History: Explorations.